Film and Theatre reviews

On top of this, Burton seems to

David Bowie

will be too busy giggling at the talking maggots, dancing skeletons and emotional thread, to fully qualify ... bona-fide Burton classic.

Bowie back on screen

David Bowie is to return to movies playing the inventor Nikola Tesla in The Prestige, a thriller from Batman Begins director Christopher Nolan.

The cast also includes Hugh Jackman, and Batman stars Christian Bale and Michael Caine in a tale of rival magicians in early 20th century London. The Tesla character is based on the real-life Serbian-American who discovered the rotating magnetic field.

The script, which Nolan is now completing, is based on Christopher Priest's 1996 novel and was adapted by Nolan's brother, Jonathan, who also wrote the short story on which Nolan's breakout movie Memento was based.

Bowie received good reviews for his earlier films such as The Man Who Fell to Earth, Merry Christmas, Mr. Lawrence and Basquiat. However, he has not performed in a movie since Mr. Rice's Secret in 2000.

Two stop-motion animated features, Tim Burton's The Corpse Bride and Wallace and Gromit: Curse of the Were-Rabbit, are among the 10 films on the short-list for an Oscar in the best animation category.

However, the rest of the field is dominated by computer animated features, highlighting the shift to the new form of movie-making.

Among those in the final 10 are Madagascar, Chicken Little, Robots, Valiant and the forthcoming Little Red Riding Hood spoof, Hoodwinked.
